

L.A. SALARY SURVEY | 2007

Who Makes How Much?

Los Angeles

The Iraq War Comes Home: Casualty #2509
BY STEVE ONY

The King of Premium Jeans
BY DAVE GARDETTA

The Best of South Pasadena
BY LESLIE ROMANO

The Mad, Mad, Mad World of LA Realtors
BY DAVID FERRELL

What Obama Has in Common With Spielberg
by John Powers

*
Paul Rudd

The whole poop on karaoke, making hit movies, and getting 'Knocked Up'

$4.95
JUNE 2007

[VENUE]

Big Picture

The Westside gets a new Landmark

» The pint-size movie theaters in the Westside Pavilion shopping mall have gotten an ArcLight-esque makeover, thanks to the Landmark chain's nationwide movement toward a more adult (as in grown-up) moviegoing experience. The new 12-theater complex, opening next to the revived Barnes & Noble on June 1, will feature a gift shop, an upscale snack bar, stadium seating with leather chairs, living-room-style private screening rooms, a concierge desk, and a swanky lounge serving wine, beer, and gourmet bites like Pizza Rustica pies. "When Landmark started specializing in unique material like foreign films and independent filmmakers, the crowds were smaller, so the theaters were smaller," says Landmark COO Ted Mundorff. "Now we've found the niche has grown. Plus, this is the company town." Not a lot: Landmark boasts that the project's most revolutionary contribution is—hello—complimentary parking. "Free parking is not new, but it's a little bit elusive," says Mundorff. "So we are going to provide in excess of 3,000 free spaces." All we can say is thank you.